

1st SLOVENIAN MICROBIOME NETWORK SYMPOSIUM

November 24, 2022
Bled, Slovenia

Research on the microbiome is an interdisciplinary effort that requires close cooperation between scientists from different disciplines in the earth, life, medical and computational sciences. This one-day symposium will highlight the current state of microbiome research conducted in Slovenia and offers networking opportunities between academic and industry partners.

CONFIRMED SPEAKERS:

David Berry, University of Vienna, AT
Michael Schlöter, Helmholtz Zentrum Munich, GER
Tina Šantl-Temkiv, Aarhus University, DK
Maja Rupnik, National laboratory of Health, Environment and Food, SLO
Denis Kutnjak, National institute of Biology, SLO
Tinkara Tinta, National institute of Biology, SLO
Marjetka Suhadolc, University of Ljubljana, SLO
Monika Novak Babič, University of Ljubljana, SLO

Organizing Committee

Nejc Stopnišek, National laboratory of Health, Environment and Food
Tomaž Accetto, University of Ljubljana
Sandra Janežič, National laboratory of Health, Environment and Food
Aleksander Mahnič, National laboratory of Health, Environment and Food
Blaž Stres, University of Ljubljana
Nataša Šibanc, Slovenian Forestry Institute
Polonca Štefanič, University of Ljubljana
Primož Treven, University of Ljubljana

Symposium topics

Animal microbiome
Human microbiome
Plant microbiome
Soil microbiome
Aquatic microbiome
Food microbiome
Wastewater microbiome
Indoor microbiome
Synthetic microbiome

Abstract submission deadline:

October 10, 2022.

Number of participants is limited to 120.

Scan the QR code to read more or go to:
slovenian microbiome.net

